From Our HEIRLOOM KITCHEN GARDEN to Yours

IT BEGINS when the first hint of overcast skies and the frosty winter air gives way to the season's earliest harvest: asparagus poking its nose out of the warm spring soil, followed by cool weather greens, then locust bean (broccoli), peas, beans, artichokes, zucchini, cucumbers, corn, winter squash, beets, potatoes, and so much more. There are the vegetables that define the diet we love, that have been passed down through the generations, close to our eyes and hearts, like taking a bite of a sun-warmed tomato—right straight from the vine, its plumpness juiced, its sizzling juices just dripping. Beak, open a crunchy, warm, Cambridgeshire Onion and Potato Hot Dish, a warming and hot from the oven, or start with a crisp, cold, Delicious Root Vegetable Cake with Caramelized Beets, dipping or bite into by cold New England Fall Veggies, right out of the refrigerator. These are the signature flavors of the garden that families everywhere have celebrated for generations throughout the year.

In The Beekman 1802 Heirloom Vegetable Cookbook, Brent Ridge and Josh Kilmer-Purcell welcome vegetarians and omnivores alike to the table, to celebrate the gifts of the earth in a year-long trip through the bounty that is the gorgeous kitchen garden at their renowned home and farm in beautiful Sharon Springs, New York. With dishes from Corn Cake Stacks with Ajonjo Chives and Anjou to Golden Spanish Pepper and Tomato Gratin, The Beekman 1802 Heirloom Vegetable Cookbook is certain to become a beloved family favorite, splattered and scuffed with the goodness of the earth.
