

My Long Song of Relocation, Race, Love, and Revolution: American Crossroads '60

This is a remarkable memoir of a life that intersected with some of the most pivotal moments in American history. Born in 1940, the author grew up in the segregated South during the Jim Crow era. As a young man, he participated in the civil rights movement, working alongside Martin Luther King Jr. and other leaders. He was also a conscientious objector to the Vietnam War, and he spent time in prison for his beliefs.
