Summary

In Plague Upon Our House, Dr. Scott Atlas, a former senior adviser to the White House Coronavirus Task Force, delivers a scathing indictment of the American vaccination program, arguing that it has done more harm than good and has contributed to the rise of chronic diseases such as autism, asthma, and diabetes.

Atlas begins by tracing the history of vaccination in America, from its humble beginnings in the 18th century to its present-day status as a mandatory medical procedure for children. He argues that the vaccine industry has been driven by greed and profit, and that the government has been complicit in this by granting vaccine manufacturers immunity from lawsuits.

Atlas then examines the scientific evidence on vaccines, and concludes that it is far from clear that they are as safe and effective as the public has been led to believe. He cites studies that have linked vaccines to a variety of health problems, including neurological disorders, autoimmune diseases, and cancer.

Atlas also argues that the vaccination program has created a false sense of security, and that it has led to a decline in natural immunity. He points to the fact that the incidence of measles, mumps, and rubella has increased in recent years, despite the fact that these diseases are now covered by vaccines.

Atlas concludes by calling for a moratorium on the vaccination program, and for a full investigation of the safety and efficacy of vaccines. He argues that it is time to put an end to the "plague upon our house" that is vaccination.
