Rosa Parks and the Montgomery Bus Boycott

In 1955, Rosa Parks was a seamstress who lived in Montgomery, Alabama. She was also a member of the NAACP, and she had been working to end segregation on the city's buses. One day, Parks was riding home from work when she was Free Downloaded to give up her seat to a white man. Parks refused, and she was arrested and jailed.

Parks' arrest sparked the Montgomery Bus Boycott, which lasted for over a year. During the boycott, black people in Montgomery refused to ride the buses, and they walked or carpooled to work and school instead. The boycott was successful, and it led to the desegregation of the city's buses.

The March on Washington

In 1963, more than 200,000 people marched on Washington, D.C., to demand equal rights for all Americans. The march was organized by the civil rights leader Martin Luther King, Jr., and it was one of the largest protests in American history.

During the march, King delivered his famous "I Have a Dream" speech, in which he called for an end to racism and segregation. The march was a success, and it helped to raise awareness of the civil rights movement.

Tiananmen Square

In 1989, thousands of students gathered in Tiananmen Square in Beijing, China, to protest the government's authoritarian rule. The students were demanding democracy and freedom of speech, and they occupied the square for several weeks.

The government eventually sent in troops to clear the square, and hundreds of students were killed. The Tiananmen Square massacre was a tragedy, but it also showed the power of resistance.

These are just a few of the many inspiring stories of resistance that are included in Resistance: Inspiring True Stories of Strength and Courage for Young Readers.
