A CIA Safe House

During the Cold War, San Miguel De Allende was home to a CIA safe house. The safe house was used by the CIA to train and support anti-communist guerrillas in Central America. The CIA's presence in San Miguel De Allende was kept secret, but it had a significant impact on the town's history.

A Town of Artists and Writers

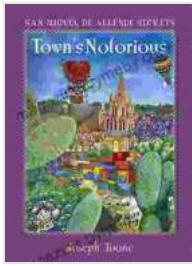

San Miguel De Allende has long been a haven for artists and writers. In the early 20th century, the town was home to a group of American expatriates known as the "Lost Generation." Members of the Lost Generation included William Faulkner, Ernest Hemingway, and John Dos Passos. These writers were drawn to San Miguel De Allende by its bohemian atmosphere and its affordable cost of living.

A Town of Secrets
